

HESTON LEE

Heston Lee is a Singer songwriter with a music style that is comparable to Lou Reed, Johnny Cash and Leonard Cohen. His debut album 'Farewell My Love' was engineered by the grammy award winning producer Youth. Heston began his music journey in 1998 when he was gifted an abandoned Spanish guitar left behind after a party. After learning to play over 10 years, he moved to Berlin where he discovered a buzzing open mic circuit to perform. He met a local producer and they spent a freezing winter (-30) in the studio recording 15 original songs. Heston returned to London and started a band "The Deep South Project". Bookings came at The Troubadour, Bedford, Dublin Castle and O2 Islington but the band did not stay together. After a few years doing various jobs he met Martin Youth Glover at a remote cafe near Granada in Spain. Glover stayed in contact and 4 years later invited Heston to record at his famous recording studio and retreat "Space Mountain". Heston recorded an album "Farewell My Love" with Glover adding bass parts. Youth also appears in the video Oh Biddy filmed at Mini Hollywood in Spain
